TORRENS ENERGY:

Western Power's former managing director, David Eiszele, has been appointed as a non-executive director to Torrens' board.

Torrens said his appointment adds "substantial commercial power and infrastructure experience" to the team.

In addition, Marcus Gracey - a corporate and intellectual property lawyer - has also been appointed to the board.

Existing board member Dr Dennis Gee will step up as non-executive chairman, replacing Mal James, while is stepping aside to make way for the incoming management configuration.

"The company's mantra of proximity to power infrastructure will be better serviced by the newly configured Board, and through a clear understanding of power infrastructure and strong technical management will be better placed to roll out a successful exploration program across its land holdings in the near future," Torrens said.

"These changes to the Board come at a time when the company is looking to support and bring forward opportunities identified in hot rock exploration for renewable, sustainable base-load power generation, hybrid pre-heating of existing power stations and potential for geothermal desalination."
